Terms and conditions:

It is the customer's responsibility to judge whether or not the software meets his needs. Future IS Consulting Ltd. makes no warranty as to the suitability of the software for the customer's specific requirements and may decline to accept any order. Cheques will only be presented when goods are ready to ship. The software will be supplied with a licence code that is keyed to the name of the school. This code must be entered when the software is activated and must not be divulged to any other party. Future IS Consulting Ltd. asserts its intellectual property rights to the design and implementation of the eAC software. Customer must not redistribute or attempt to reverse-engineer the software. Customer must provide and maintain the necessary infrastructure including a suitable PC and its operating system as well as any network and server components.

Back-up of data, passwords and keys:

Customer is responsible for back-up of all data and software. It is recommended that the database files are installed on a server system that is backed up regularly. Future IS Consulting Ltd. will not be responsible for lost data files, passwords or keys. Any support required to recover such a loss will be chargeable.

Microsoft™ components:

The CD-ROM contains Microsoft components that may be required to ensure the satisfactory running of the eAC system. These are the property of Microsoft Corporation and are licensed only for distribution and use with eAC. If you already have Microsoft Office 2000 Professional Edition or above on your PC, you may not need to install the Microsoft components that are supplied with eAC.

Please supply one copy of eAC on CD-ROM. I accept the above terms and conditions and enclose a cheque for £115 plus VAT (£135.13), inclusive of postage and packing, made payable to Future IS Consulting Ltd.
